Artificial Flowers.

Facts about an Interesting and Ex

The first artificial flowers made were of ribbons of various colors, twisted together and fastened to wire stems. These clumsy imitations, however, soon gave John W. Childs, John Gaynor and El. way to flowers made of feathers. Some very perfect specimens of feather flowers, made by the savages of South America, from the bright plumage of their birds, were displayed of the Centennial. The Italians next manufactured flowers of sick cocoons, which were very beautiful. But the paim is now, and has long been, given to the French, who perfected the present process of making flowers of muslin and silk.
